The French Gulde Is a Public Pest. Paris has produced a species which is the lowest embodiment of sentient being. It is the "guide." The guide is an evolutionary "throwback," a reversion to type. You must go deep into the muck heap whence the race has risen to find his prototype-back of the ape, back of the tiger, back of the snouting bog, though he partakes of the nature of all of these, to the dim | while ages when nameless treglodytes treaded in cold lethargy the primerdial silme. Somewhere in that category belongs the Paris guide. Interminably these ghosts of dead decencies squeak and gibber in the streets of the city .-

A Long Spell of Duty. A Scotsman had come to London on his way to India and for a few days had time to amuse himself by sightseeing before his departure, says Oscar Ramsay in his "Reminiscences." He had been much struck with the appearance of the mounted sentinels of the herse guards, Whitehall, and bore them in remembrance during his east era sojourn. On his return after a period of thirty years, on passing the horse guards, he looked up to one, and seeing him, as he thought, unchanged as to horse, position and accounterments, he exclaimed, "Od, freend, ye hae had a lang spell on't sin' I left."
